IS THE SUN SETTING ON SUNSET CAY?

CITY, STATE AIM TO SHUT DOWN THE "SHIP STORE" AT SUNSET CAY MARINA

By Bill Davis | Staff Writer

Look! Up in the beautiful sunset! Is it a bar? A ship's store? A social club? No, it's a never-ending lawsuit.

For decades, locals have been sauntering over to a second-floor haunt above the Sunset Cay Marina to grab a cold one and watch the best sunset on the backside of Folly Beach.

But for the past year, the City of Folly Beach and several state agencies have been trying to shut down the watering hole. And its lawyers have been fighting, successfully so far, to keep the good times rolling.

Next Tuesday, Sunset Cay Ship Store's owner, John Oliver, will have yet another chance in front of City Council to keep the doors open. The owner of the ship store/social club, represented by lawyer Ian O'Shea, leases the spot from the marina.

The business could be seen as a convenience store where boaters can buy supplies and do with them what they want.

ANOTHER SOLD-OUT SURFERS HEALING TO TAKES PLACE

By Lorne Chambers | Editor

Surfers Healing has camps in South Carolina, North Carolina, Florida, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, New York, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Washington, California, Hawaii and even Mexico and Australia. However, the charity is synonymous with Folly Beach. That's because for the last decade Nancy Hussey and company have helped build an event out here that locals are proud of. On Aug. 25, the ninth annual Surfers Healing event will be held on Folly Beach.

Many children with autism struggle with sensory overload; in other words, simple sensations can overwhelm them. The weightlessness and rhythms of the ocean offer a therapeutic experience, a respite from the constant assault on their senses. So every year Surfer's Healing takes kids with autism surfing.

They paddle out together on tandem boards to catch the waves. The response from the children is truly inspiring.

"Our Folly Beach Camp has evolved over the last nine years from probably the smallest stop on the Surfers Healing tour to a completely full event, with hundreds on a waiting list," says Hussey, who founded Folly's chapter of Surfer's Healing and continued on PAGE 4 has been the driving force behind the charity locally.

With community support and the charity's exposure at an all-time high, Hussey hopes this year's Surfers Healing event will be the best one yet. "Every year we try to see how we can better serve our incredible families that come for Surfers Healing," says Hussey. "By really listening to the parents and volunteers, we try our best to make improvements and tweaks that will help the day run smoothly and pack in as much fun as we can."

According to Hussey, there are now team leaders for the various volunteer jobs on the beach, making a huge difference in the organization of the event. "We have so many absolutely incredible volunteers, many have been with us since the beginning with new friends joining in all the time," she says. "It's a beautiful thing and a joyous feeling when everyone comes together for Surfers Healing. The terms 'giving back' and 'paying it forward' are used a lot. It's true, but in my heart I believe that the volunteers, friends, sponsors, the Folly Beach community, and everyone who comes out feel as though they receive much more than they give. I know I do."

Prior to the big event on Aug. 25, there will also be a benefit for Surfer's Healing on Saturday, Aug. 6 from noon until 5 p.m. at Loggerhead's Beach Grill, located at 123 West Ashley Ave. One-hundred percent of the proceeds from the event benefit Surfers Healing Folly Beach Camp.

In the future, Hussey says she would like to see the Folly's Surfers Healing become a weekend-long event. "I would love for our 'One Perfect Day' to be 'Two Perfect Days!,'" she says. "To accomplish this, we'll need more help than ever before. We can make it happen!" She says there are many ways to be involved with Surfers Healing. Parking O'Plenty

PARKING ON FOLLY BEACH DOESN'T HAVE TO BE A HEADACHE, JUST LEARN THE RULES

By Alan Kleinfeld | Contributing Writer

Parking. It's an issue Public Safety deals with year around, but it grows exponentially every summer, as tourists, visitors and guests drive everything from Hondas to Hummers on to Folly Beach.

If Public Safety had to inform only the approximately 2,400-year-around residents of the parking rules, the issue would be the size of a pea. In no time, everyone would know the rules. For Folly Beach (Public Safety, The City, residents) it's an unending education because there is a constant flux of new guests arriving.

Paid parking is available at every beach access and the parking on Center Street is free. If people take a chance in the Right of Way (ROW), they have to know the rules, which include:

- No parking on roadway. All four tires must be off the road. If white lines are painted, tires must be inside the white line.
- No parking on sidewalks.
- No blocking public or private driveways.
- No parking within 15 feet of a fire hydrant.
- No parking in a crosswalk.
- No stopping, standing, or parking in a roadway.
- No diagonal parking unless posted. All parking must be parallel to the roadway.
- No parking on dunes or revetments.
- No parking against traffic. All vehicles must park with the flow of traffic.
- No parking in handicapped spaces unless visible handicapped license tag or visible permit on vehicle.
- No parking within 20 feet of an intersection.
- No parking on yellow curbs or within areas marked by yellow street lines.
- No parking behind yellow lines.

Most of the signs in the Right of Way (like this one) are unauthorized as the City doesn't often approve requests for City-issued signs.

For a quick, easy rundown, visit the City of Folly's web site (<http://www.cityoffollybeach.com/city-departments-services/public-safety/folly-rules/#parking-rules>) has the parking rules listed.

Ignorance of them doesn't provide an excuse.

The City currently has an ongoing project to paint yellow lines along the intersections where parking is prohibited. But if you let us know about areas that need a no parking sign or yellow paint, you can do so by submitting a request to Public Works online at <http://www.cityoffollybeach.com/submit-public-works-request/>.

City ordinance does allow property owners to request private, no parking signs from the City where they have a compelling need. However, most of the signs in the Right of Way (ROW) are probably unauthorized as the City doesn't often approve requests for City-issued signs.

City of Folly Beach Mayor Tim Goodwin recently appointed a committee (Council Member Laurie Hull, Zoning Administrator Aaron Pope, and Deputy Chief of Public Safety Steve Mims) to look at parking on the island, and part of their work is considering new recommendations on private signs in the ROW.

Another common issue is illegal obstructions to the ROW, such as plants, posts, signs, etc. These tend to be spread here and there and the City addresses them as we get reports of problems. If you want to report a ROW obstruction, please email inspect@cityoffollybeach.com and the City will get in touch with the owner to address the problem.

Folly Beach Public Safety can be reached at 843.588.7003. Please like their Facebook page to be kept informed of activity on the island: facebook.com/FollyBeachPublicSafety.

Cannonball Part of Folly Beach's History

LOCAL TEACHER AND AUTHOR DONATES HER "BEST FIND EVER," A CIVIL WAR-ERA CANNONBALL TO CITY OF CHARLESTON

By Lorne Chambers | Editor

If you've been to City Hall lately, you may have noticed a cannonball encased in glass on the second floor, just as you step off the elevator. That cannonball has had two lives and has many stories to tell. First, it was part of our nation's Civil War. Then, nearly 150 years later, on a foggy December morning it was rediscovered by local kindergarten teacher Dale Hawkins and her two children, Lauren and Lexi, on the west end of Folly Beach.

"The beach was deserted as Lauren, Lexi and I spotted the cannonball along the edge of the water," recalled Hawkins. "The waves were breaking over the cannonball. We thought it was a rock or meteor." Days later she took it to her classroom and had her students write about what it could be. "I didn't have any idea what it was so I took it to school and let my kindergarten students write stories about this round ball," she said. It was while at the school, she discovered it was actually a cannonball from the Civil War. She began to learn more about the history of the relic and in doing so, the history of Folly Beach.

Hawkins took it to the Civil War Expo at the Gaillard for verification and learned she had an important piece of local history. "They confirmed that it was indeed a cannonball," said Hawkins. "They said it wasn't the kind that explodes but rather when fired at a ship it caused a big hole and the ship sank."

During the Civil War, Folly Island served as a camp and supply depot for Union troops besieging the city of Charleston. The only actual fighting to occur on Folly was on May 10, 1863, when a small group of Confederate forces, on a fact-finding mission, attacked Union forces. The battle was brief and Folly remained under Union control for the rest of the war. It was used as the staging area for the Battles of Fort Wagner, which were fought between July and September of 1863. Also, Morris Island was the location of Fort Wagner. The Second Battle of Fort Wagner was depicted in the 1989 film Glory.

While countless people scour our beach everyday, looking for sharks teeth and pretty shells, Hawkins and her children had found something much more significant. So she wanted to document it in some way. "Writing a children's book has been a dream of mine since third or fourth grade," said Hawkins, who took a graduate class at The Citadel to learn a little bit more about writing a children's book. She teamed up with Mt. Pleasant illustrator Laura Martindale, who told Hawkins illustrating a children's book was on her bucket list.

Entitled My Best Find Ever, Hawkins' book is realistic fiction that tells the story of a little boy looking for pirate treasure but instead finds a cannonball. "I included many features of Folly Beach," said Hawkins, who also embedded several QR codes on various pages that when scanned take the readers to a website which explains the page in more detail. For example, on the seashell page the QR code will tell you more about the Lettered Olive, the official state sea shell of South Carolina.

"Because I included South Carolina history, I have gone into quite a few classrooms where the students were studying about South Carolina," said Hawkins, who has kept the cannonball on the shelf in her living room for last six years. "While I love it, I always knew that it wasn't really mine. I was going to donate it to a museum downtown but after talking to (City of Folly Beach mayor) Tim and Charlotte Goodwin I decided that it should remain on Folly," said Hawkins. "It belongs to everyone on Folly, not just me. It is a big part of our history."

At the May City Council meeting, Mayor Goodwin officially presented the cannonball and told Hawkins story about finding it and how it ended up at City Hall. The mayor's wife, Charlotte Goodwin, arranged for Folly artist Jane Word of to design and build the stand that the cannonball is now encased in glass for everyone to see.

"Eventually we would like to see a museum on Folly Beach," said Hawkins, who retains the right to check it out for future book signings. "When I take it to signings people always want to touch it and have their picture taken with it," she said.

While the cannonball remains Hawkins' "best find ever," she has discovered her talent as a children's author and is working on a new book entitled Two Carolina Girls, which should be available soon.

BEACH BLOTTER

The following were taken from actual incident reports filed last month by the Folly Beach Public Safety Department. These are not convictions and the names of businesses, complainants, and suspects have been left out to protect the innocent. All suspects are innocent until proven guilty ... of course.

JULY 1 WHO LET THE DOG OUT?

Officer responded to an E. Arctic Avenue address in reference to a disturbance. Several callers reported a female screaming in the roadway. Upon arrival, the officer met with a male who stated he found a dog while walking in the area of the incident location. Upon checking its collar, it was discovered the dog's owner lived at the address. The male stated he knocked on the door, which was answered by the suspect. He stated she immediately began yelling at him, and followed him into the street, continuously yelling. However, while she was still standing in the middle of the street she was not being disruptive at the time the officer arrived on the scene. But he did immediately detect a strong, distinct odor of an alcoholic beverage emitting from her person and she was unsteady on her feet, had slurred speech, and appeared to have difficulty making eye contact. The suspect refused to cooperate when asked about the incident and repeatedly stated she was going home and would not speak to the officer. Advised she was not free to leave the scene, as she was the suspect of the disturbance and grossly intoxicated in the roadway, she continued to state she was going home. She became agitated and began to raise her voice, and continued to refuse to cooperate with the investigation and was placed under arrested for Disorderly Conduct.

JULY 2 PINKY & THE NO-BRAIN

Officers were dispatched in reference to a residential alarm. Dispatch advised that two male subjects were observed running down the driveway and advised one unknown white male subject, and one black male subject, having pink board shorts and blonde/pink mohawk. Upon arrival, the officers found the rear door to the porch was unlocked. Nothing appeared to have been out of the ordinary. Several TVs were inside the living room and bedrooms. Upon leaving the residence the officers locked the rear porch door from the inside.

JULY 3 ISSUING A BENCH WARRANT

A public safety officer observed a man passed out on the bench at Center Street and Ashley Ave. He woke the man up and asked him where he was staying. The man seemed very intoxicated and had a strong odor of alcohol on his breath. He could not answer the questions and became very uncooperative. The officer asked if the suspect needed a taxi and again he became very uncooperative and refused to answer any questions. He was then placed under arrest for Disorderly Conduct.

JULY 5 A RELIGIOUS RITUAL

Officers were dispatched to the Folly pier after an alarm was sounded. While en route to the end of the pier, the officers noticed a male who looked directly in their direction and then proceeded to jump off of the county pier and into the ocean. He swam north towards the beachfront, as officers tried to communicate with him by shining flashlights on him to ensure his safety, and continuously ask if he was ok. The individual ignored the officers who were trying to communicate with him, and continued to swim towards the shore. At this point one of the officers immediately headed towards the beachfront to intercept and meet with the man who was still swimming. He had reached shore and was walking briskly east along the shoreline, and away from the pier, about 300 feet from the officers location. After sprinting in the individuals general direction, the officer was able to catch up to, him and effectively detain him. The man stated that as part of a religious ritual he jumped off of the county pier. He was subsequently placed under arrest for Trespassing.

JULY 5 A PAIN IN THE BACK

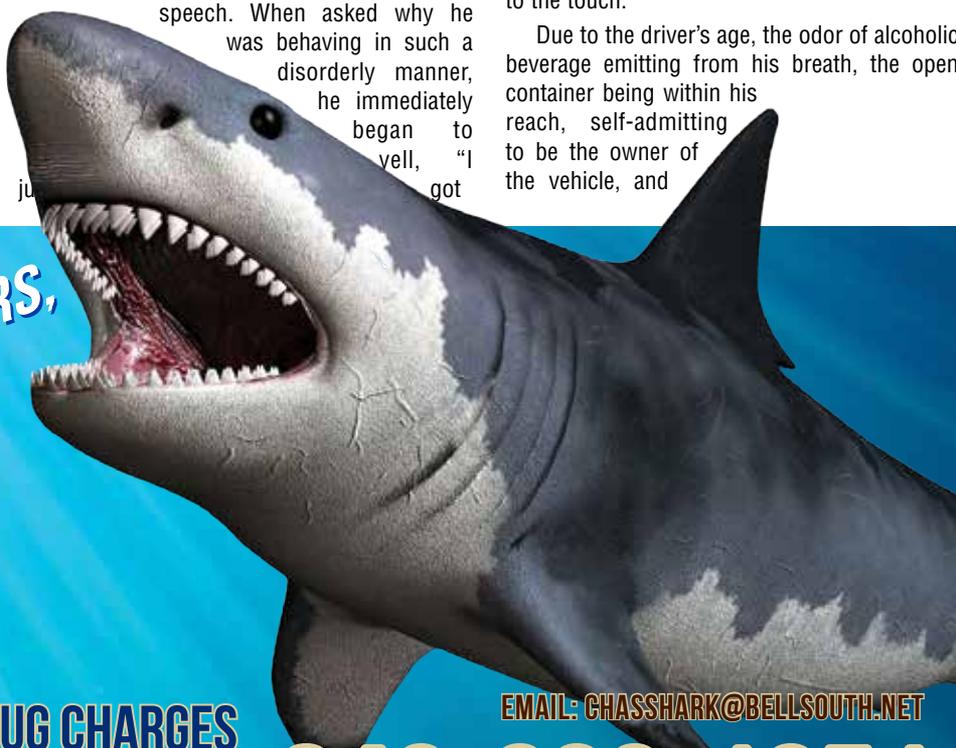

An officer was dispatched to a W. Hudson Ave. address in reference to a theft that occurred earlier in the day. The victim advised that he and his family went out in town for the afternoon. Later when he went to take his prescription medication (oxycontin), which he takes for his back pain, he noticed about 18 pills missing. He stated that during the day his family was out of the residence but there were handymen that came to the house to fix different items and he suspects that one of the workers stole some of his pills that he left them sitting on the counter.

JULY 6 ALL CHOKED UP

An officer was exiting his vehicle at a Folly Road grocery store when he could hear a male standing by a vehicle loudly yelling obscenities. He was yelling at such a high volume and was behaving in such a disruptive manner that it immediately caught the attention of the several patrons at the incident location. They observed the male walking away from the vehicle toward Sol Legare Road and was holding a bottle with a yellow-colored liquid inside. When the officer called out to the man he tossed the bottle, which was labeled "Jim Beam Honey Bourbon Whiskey", onto the ground behind him. The officer detected a very strong smell of alcohol emitting from his breath and person. He was unsteady on his feet and had slurred speech. When asked why he was behaving in such a disorderly manner, he immediately began to yell, "I ju got choked!" When asked to explain, he passively refused and had no obvious indication of injury at the time of contact. He was placed under arrest for Disorderly Conduct. The officer spoke with the driver and two passengers in the vehicle the suspect arrived in and they stated there was no physical altercation whatsoever and that he had been drinking heavily and had been behaving belligerently and "weird" all day. JULY 7

HOW ABOUT CAMPING OUT IN A JAIL CELL?
An officer was patrolling the beachfront at the pier and observed a man sleeping on the ground underneath the pier. When he was awoken and asked why he was sleeping on the beach, the man replied he was staying at a nearby hotel. The officer noted he had a strong smell of an alcohol about his person. The officer called the hotel to see if he was indeed staying there, which he was not. The man was arrested for Disorderly Conduct and issued a citation for Overnight Camping.

JULY 8
OLD ENOUGH TO GET PREGNANT, BUT NOT OLD ENOUGH TO DRINK
Officer responded to an area of 600 block in reference to an illegally parked black Chevrolet at the dead end of E. Hudson Ave. in a wooded area on posted private property. The officer made contact with the driver and a female passenger. The 19-year-old driver was wearing only a pair of shorts was sweating profusely, and his breath emitted a distinct odor of an alcohol. He stated he and the woman parked at the incident location to engage in sexual intercourse. In the bed of the truck, the officer observed several empty bottles and cans of various brands of alcoholic beverages, some of which still contained liquid. One of the items was a half full container of box wine. In the back passenger side floorboard in plain sight was an open glass bottle of Smirnoff Ice, which contained a yellow-colored liquid and was cold to the touch. Due to the driver's age, the odor of alcoholic beverage emitting from his breath, the open container being within his reach, self-admitting to be the owner of the vehicle, and him having possession and complete physical control of the vehicle, he was placed under arrest for Minor In Possession of Alcohol and Open Container In Motor Vehicle.

Upon conducting a vehicle inventory prior to being towed, located inside of a yellow purse were two additional, unopened bottles of Smirnoff Ice. He stated "everything" inside of the purse belonged to him.

SELLING OUT YOUR BUDDY

Two officers were on patrol in the area of the pier around 3:20 a.m. when they noticed two male subjects walking up the ramp toward the locked gate. The first subject grabbed the gate and jumped around the gate door over the railing. The second subject was holding a white cup in his hand. He gave the cup to the other suspect and then jumped around the gate and over the railing as well.

They proceeded toward the second locked gate and jumped that gate as well and walked toward the pavilion at the end of the pier.

The officers unlocked the gate and entered the pier. Once they got close to the pavilion both subjects noticed the officers and began walking toward them. The one threw a hand up as if he were waving while the other placed his cup down on the railing in an attempt to hide it from the officers.

They were then advised that they were trespassing and to place their hands behind their backs. At that time one suspect reached in his right pocket and threw a pack of American Spirit cigarettes on the ground. Inside the pack was a clear plastic bag that was consistent with narcotics packaging.

The suspects were advised to sit on the stairs while the officers checked the area where the cup was placed on the railing. The officers then observed another clear plastic bag with a white powder substance on the railing right next to the cup.

When the officer walked over to the suspect and advised them they would be going to jail one stood up and stated "I know that I was in possession of cocaine but its not mine. I get that I was in possession, but his shorts were wet and I was just holding it for him (referencing his friend)."

JULY 9

A TINDER MYSTERY

At 3:15 a.m. two officers were dispatched in reference to a missing 20-year-old girl at the beachfront at 300 block east. The caller stated that he was on a date this evening with a girl he met on Tinder. Earlier in the night they had been to a reggae fest in Charleston and came out to Folly Beach around midnight.

The man claims they sat on the beach, before engaging in sexual intercourse then got into the water. Once they returned from the water, they both fell asleep. According to him, they then fell asleep on the beach until around 2 a.m. when the young lady walked off to use the bathroom and never returned.

After approximately 10 minutes, the man noticed that she had not returned and started to look for her. He stated that he walked up and down the dunes and spoke to several people all of which advised that they did not see her. After about an hour, he decided to contact the police department.

The man admitted that they both were drinking but he did not think the woman was that intoxicated. He advised that she was wearing a black crop top and a "hippie style" dress. He also advised that she left her purse, cell phone, and sandals in his vehicle.

The officers conducted a search of the dunes from the pier to 5th block east and then back down the beachfront without finding her. Another officer arrived on the scene and began driving the island and checking local businesses that were still open.

After retrieving her personal belongings, the responding officer contacted dispatch and had them send county units to her residence. The officer noticed that one particular phone number called her phone 17 times so he took a picture of the screen. County advised that they tried the residence and did not get an answer.

The officer then called the phone number that attempted to call the woman's phone and made contact with a taxi cab driver who stated that he was picking up several males at Bert's when the woman approached him. He advised that the woman was extremely intoxicated and advised that she lost her purse and phone and needed a ride home. The male subjects agreed to let her ride with them to the 1500 block of E. Ashley then the cabbie drove her home. He said she made the 17 calls to her phone in hopes someone would pick up and tell her where her phone was.

At that point the officer contacted dispatch again and had county go over to her residence for a second time. This time they were able to make contact with the woman, who advised that she was OK. It was relayed to her that her items would be at the police department and to come pick them up in the morning..

Later that morning the woman took possession of her belongings later and again advised that she was OK.

JULY 9

POKÉMON GO ... DIRECTLY TO JAIL

Two officers were dispatched to the pier after an alarm was sounded. The officers proceeded to walk towards the southern tip of the pier, where two male subjects were spotted walking in their directions.

The two suspects stated that they intentionally entered the pier after hours, because they were participating in a Pokémon Go video game which they explained, places each player at a unique area throughout the city to gain points. Unfortunately for them, they chose to play this game at the wrong area, and at the wrong time.

BAD RACE RELATIONS

Officers were dispatched after receiving a call that a large group of males were fighting in the parking lot behind a local surf shop. Officers arrived on scene and the crowd immediately began to disperse. As the crowd faded one officer was approached by a young woman who stated that while inside a nearby bar she was approached by an unknown black female who would not stop antagonizing her, because, according to her, she was white and the lady was bothered by the fact that she was dating a black man. She also stated that the woman threw a drink on her and walked off into the crowd.

According to the complainant, she and her boyfriend decided to leave the bar after the altercation and were walking to their vehicle, but her boyfriend realized he left his keys inside the bar so they had to turn around to go back and get them.

On their way back inside the woman claims she was attacked by two unknown females, one of the females was small in stature and the second female was noticeably larger and heavier. She said her boyfriend tried to intervene, but a large mob of males started walking towards his direction, at which time security staff from bar and police personnel arrived on scene, alleviating the crowd and causing mass dispersion. The woman's injuries appeared to be minor and overall she was in good spirits following the incident.

JULY 16

YOLO ... BUT YOU CAN GO TO JAIL AS MANY TIMES AS YOU WANT

An officer responded to a local bar on a disorderly subject complaint. When he arrived on the scene the suspect was being restrained by two bar employees and the owner, who informed the officers that the woman was asked to leave and to be placed on trespass notice. She then allegedly became very belligerent with the owner and other employees and threw an alcoholic beverage into his face. That's when she was restrained by employees of the bar.

The woman was taken into custody for Disorderly Conduct and was placed on trespass notice at the bar. According to the arresting officer, she had a very distinct odor of an alcoholic beverage on her breath and she was slurring her words. While being searched she was being belligerent and uncooperative and making threats towards officers. She was placed in the back of the patrol car and seat belted in for her safety for transport to Charleston County Jail. During transport she managed to get out of her seatbelt and became belligerent and began making more threats.

When they arrived at the county jail the woman again became very belligerent and had passive resistance towards the officers commands on getting out of the vehicle.

The officer asked her to get out of the vehicle three times and she refused before making suicidal remarks and kicked the back window of the patrol car while. Four detention officers arrived and shackled her feet together and had to drag her out of the vehicle. She again made threats and racial remarks towards the detention officers. Once she got inside the search and booking area she was then placed in a restraint chair and still made racial and threatening remarks to the detention officers and was very uncooperative to the commands she was given.

SERVE YOURSELF

An officer was on foot patrol behind a local hotel at approximately 3 a.m. when he observed a man walk behind the outside bar and over to the beer tap station. The officer thought it might have been an employee cleaning up after the bar shut down. But then noticed that he had a clear plastic cup in hand and began pouring a beer into it from one of the taps. Being that it was after 2 a.m. and alcohol service is prohibited past that time, he initiated contact with the man. As the officer began walking towards him, he threw the beer in the trash can.

The officer asked him if he worked at the hotel and he stated "No but they all know me." He was then asked why he was pouring a beer. The man stated "What beer, prove it." The officer then made contact with the manager on duty and asked them if they knew the man and she stated that she did know him but he was not allowed to steal the beer. The man was then issued a summons for Petit Larceny and released him.

City Council Report – July 2016

LOITERING & PARKING DISCUSSED, JAZZ FEST GETS A BOOST, RICOH DEAL IS MADE

By Lorne Chambers | Editor

WORK SESSION

On Tuesday, July 12 Mayor Tim Goodwin and members of City Council as well as several members of the City staff participated in a work session prior to the regular scheduled City Council meeting. Topics of discussion at the work session included enforcing private No Parking signs around the island and the possibility of instituting a loitering ordinance, which was introduced by Folly Beach Public Safety.

In regards to increasing unofficial private no parking signs in public ROW and on public property, the mayor posed two scenarios to the council. "We've got enough people out there right now complaining about parking signs now, that we've got to do something," he said. "We either got to say 'We're going do nothing as a city, y'all have at it' or we come up with something so that by Jan. 1 and you guys got to have to have them down. And this is where we're going to start and here's where it's going to go," said Goodwin, who suggested starting in the commercial district first and then working outwards into the neighborhoods. "That way everybody else will be put on notice that it's coming," said Goodwin.

The other hot topic discussed at the work session was the idea of a loitering ordinance brought forward by Public Safety director Andrew Gilreath. "This is just another tool in our toolbox that allows to use in a situation where it applies," said Gilreath, who felt the way the ordinance is written would hold up in court and still allow the individual plenty of room to give a reasonable explanation as to why they were loitering. Gilreath said there's a direct correlation between Folly's loitering population and crime on Folly Beach. City attorney Joe Wilson says the proposed ordinance has been vetted and seems to be OK from a legal standpoint.

REGULAR MEETING

The regular Meeting of Council was called to order promptly at 7 p.m. by mayor Goodwin.

All councilmembers were in attendance.

3. MAYOR'S COMMENTS

Mayor Goodwin talked about several of the positive things going on in the community, including the success of Family Fun Nights and the Folly Beach Farmer's Market. He also talked about the library's Monday night series for kids, saying that he enjoyed the magician that performed last month as much as the children did.

4. STAFF REPORTS

Public Safety director Gilreath spoke about the Victim's Advocate Fund donations that were made. He said they chose to make donations to My Sister's House and People Against Rape. Representatives of both organizations were in attendance to accept the contributions.

Zoning Administrator Aaron Pope then spoke about the Grant for the Sea Level Adaption Report, which deals with how the city will deal with sea level change, including flooding. Pope says that city decision makers, as well as other organizations, such as SCDNR and DHEC, as well as the Sea Grant Consortium are looking at how to develop the best practices in an event of sea level change.

PERSONAL APPEARANCES

Rick Stringer of the Folly Jazz Festival showed a sponsorship recruiting video before asking for the City to again be a sponsor for the Folly Beach Jazz Festival, which will be held Nov. 5-6.

Councilmember DJ Rich voiced concern that the festival will also be asking for accommodation tax (A-Tax) money, which comes from the city, so that in a sense the city would already be sponsoring the festival through A-Tax money. Rich made a motion that the city wait until the A-Tax board decided how much to allocate to the Jazz Festival before the City also pledged money towards it.

Along with Rich, councilmembers Eddie Ellis and Pennell Clamp agreed council should wait, but were overruled and council, ultimately pledged $2,500 toward the Jazz Festival from City Council's discretionary fund. Rich said his biggest problem was that the money was coming out of discretionary fund. He said he preferred to have budgeted the money instead of every year taking it out of the discretionary fund, pointing out that Sea & Sand and Surfers Healing received zero from the fund.

Next up, Joe Kohut requested to hold the fifth annual Thomas & Kohut's Midnight Run on Oct. 14. The run is a charity Action for Healthy Kids, which helps promote healthy activities in schools. Council unanimously approved the date of the run.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS

The second reading of Ordinance 17-16 was to amend the Folly Beach Code of Ordinances dealing with providing criteria for approval and setting fees for private events held at city-owned buildings and public spaces. It passed unanimously.

The second reading of Ordinance 18-16 to "clean up" the City's Business Licensing was approved with councilmember Ellis being the lone "no" vote.

Next up was the second reading for Ordinance 19-16, which amends the Folly Beach Code of Ordinances to establishing Stormwater Management Utility fees, providing for the classification of real property subject to such fees, establishing the amount of Stormwater Management Utility Fees and providing for the use of such fees by the Stormwater Management Utility of the City of Folly Beach. The amendment passed unanimously.

Ordinance 20-16 came up for second reading, which would amend Folly Beach Code of Ordinances dealing with Mandatory Building Codes to the most recent state-approved building codes. It also passed unanimously.

NEW BUSINESS

Ordinance 21-16 would Amend Emergency Management of the Folly Beach Code of Ordinances by Clarifying Responsibility for Emergency Planning and Defining Emergency Powers of the Mayor. It passed first reading unanimously.

Ordinance 22-16, which would amend the Flood Damage Prevention chapter of the Folly Beach Code of Ordinances to clarify certain definitions and procedures was approved unanimously upon first reading.

Ordinance 23-16, amending parking regulations dealing with unauthorized private "No Parking" signs and loading zones in the right of way was approved on first reading.

Ordinance 24-16 which amends the laws dealing with "Offenses Against Public Peace" a.k.a. "loitering" was approved unanimously upon first reading.

Resolution 34-16, awarding the bid for janitorial services to J&T Cleaning Service, LLC., in an Amount not to Exceed $29,999, was approved unanimously upon first reading.

Resolution 35-16 would authorize city staff to expend Beach Maintenance Funds for a seawall at the 12th East walkover was approved unanimously upon first reading.

Resolution 36-16 authorized city staff to enter a five-year contract with Ricoh USA, Inc., for two leased copy machines. Council unanimously approved but not before joking when the mayor referred to it as "the Ricoh deal," which sounded a lot like the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations (RICO) Act, which involves organized crime cases. He even joked that Ryan Hall, the city's IT director is from Chicago, home of Al Capone. But town administrator Spencer Whetmore was quick to note that thorough Hall's hard work on this deal, it actually saved the city $14,000 annually.

Or they can buy a single mini-bottle and a single soda and be given a separate cup of ice, and do what they will with them on the deck. Overlooking the boats in the picturesque marina. While looking at the sunset. With friends. On a deck.

Last March, the state's Office of Coastal Resource Management (OCRM) sent the owner of the club a cease and desist letter, saying that activity at the spot was in violation of state law.

Officials had spotted mini-bottles and what they wrote was evidence of other kinds of activity that was in violation of strict state laws.

In short, state politicians and policy makers have crafted laws and policies that look to protect South Carolina's coast from becoming a second Florida.

Overdevelopment in the Sunshine State has resulted in clogged beachfronts and cays, littered with McMansions where manmade chemical runoff is literally letting loose algae blankets on waterways along its intercoastal areas.

As such, the Palmetto State has a series of legal and regulatory hoops any business must jump through to open its doors along, and especially, over navigable waters here.

The owner was sent another cease and desist letter in the fall from the state, and in turn surrendered the business license.

But O'Shea appealed the city's resulting decision to terminate the license, a maneuver that allowed the "social club" to stay open while the appeal was being heard.

A crafty leap through a barely visible legal loophole that has since been closed by City Council.

City Administrator Spencer Wetmore said the place is still being open puts the city "in a tough spot, because our business license ordinance requires businesses to comply with all applicable laws."

Wetmore also reported having received noise complaints about the business, as well as reports of parking problems and public drunkenness.

And once the city was "on notice" of the OCRM violation, "we had no choice but to deny their license application."

Folly code allows the city to deny a license when "the application is incomplete, contains a misrepresentation, false or misleading statement, evasion or suppression of a material fact, or when the activity for which the license is sought is unlawful or constitutes a public nuisance," according to a letter city zoning administrator Aaron Pope sent to the business' attorney, O'Shea.

O'Shea, who was reached Friday for comment during his vacation in the Florida Keys, declined to comment for this story, citing "ethical" constraints stopping him from commenting on ongoing litigation. When reminded that lawyers often comment publicly on pending cases, O'Shea said he wasn't going to budge.

OCRM and state Department of Health and Environmental Control officers declined to comment, also.

Wetmore said she expects the to appeal the City Council ruling if its not to their liking, up to the state Circuit Court, which, she said, could enable it to stay open even longer.

While they can't technically "serve" you at the Sunset Cay ship store, you can buy a beer there. You'll just have to open it yourself.

Keep Moving – Change Lanes Later

We're still having issues on the weekends with traffic backing up in the left lane of Folly Road toward Folly Beach, just before the first bridge. It seems that the locals and regular visitors stay in the left lane because they know they have to be in the left lane to cross the bridge with its single lane. The right lane is empty of vehicles. I've noticed that if a stray car dares to drive in the right lane up to the merging area, the drivers in the left lane inch closer to each other and refuse to let the right lane driver merge. Some vehicles move over to straddle the white line and block cars from going around them. These drivers feel like they have been sitting there for too long to let someone cut in line ahead of them.

But, how do shoppers from the Harris Teeter, or residents of the Preserve, or residents of the proposed new apartment complex get into the left lane from the right lane? Residents of Riverview make the left turn onto Folly Road and have nowhere to go because the left lane is blocked.

Who wants to get to the beach feeling anger and frustration with our fellow drivers? There is a logical way to overcome this problem and get everybody to the beach quickly and safely. We should use both lanes. That's right. We should use the right lane, too.

We need a sign just past the stop light at Sol Legare and Folly roads that reads, "KEEP MOVING - CHANGE LANES LATER." You may remember a sign like this on the exit from I-26 to Cosgrove Avenue. We should use both lanes, drive all the way to the merging area, be courteous to each other, and merge alternately. One car at a time. Just like the current sign says. Yes, there is a sign that reads, "NOTICE - ALTERNATE MERGE WHEN CONGESTED." Alternate merge means that one car from the right lane moves into position and then one car from the left lane moves into position to create the single lane to cross the bridge. The right lane is marked with large white arrows showing drivers where to merge. It would be easier to understand if the left and right lanes were positioned differently so that both lanes had to move over creating a new "middle" lane.

If we used both lanes, and merged alternately, we would remove the dangerous backup of cars in the left lane all the way to Fort Johnson Road and beyond. There is also a sign that reads, "DO NOT PASS" just after the alternate merge sign. I believe one new sign would help educate drivers so that we can all work together to make our drive easier.

Respectfully submitted,
Andie Weathers

Christmas Comes Early

PROLIFIC AUTHOR BILL NOEL DROPS AN EARLY PRESENT WITH FOLLY HOLIDAY MYSTERY SILENT NIGHT

Special to The Current

Folly Beach is once again prominently featured in the newest novel by Kentucky-based author Bill Noel. Silent Night is the 11th installment in the prolific author's Folly Beach Mystery series.

Noel weaves the charm and character of the small barrier island and nearby Charleston throughout the pages of his new book.

The official release date is Monday, Aug. 8 for Silent Night, which is not only the latest in the Folly Beach Mystery series, but also unique in that it is his first holiday tale. Subtitled A Folly Beach CHRISTMAS Mystery, the book is being released earlier in the year so readers of the popular series can have copies before the holiday season.

The new novel is also shorter and priced lower than the other books in the series. Those who have read one or more of the first 10 books will be familiar with Chris Landrum and his merry band of misfits who stumble, bumble, and somehow manage to catch killers who appear almost as often on Folly Beach as sunburned tourists.

"Folly Beach continues to be a magical and mysterious place. I've tried to capture the charm, character, and characters of the island in the series," said Noel, who lives in Louisville, Ky., but feels at home on Folly.

"I'm not privileged to live on Folly Beach, yet I've been welcomed with open arms by everyone I've had contact with there the last nine years. Residents have offered me valuable insights, information, and more than a few potential plots. If I bumped-off everyone Folly residents have suggested, the population would be drastically reduced!"

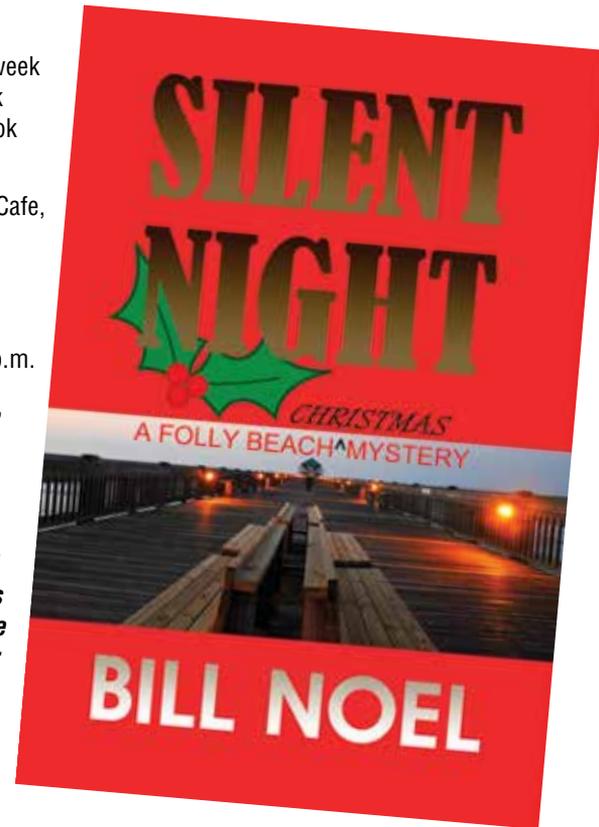

Written to be perfect beach reads, Noel's novels are light, humorous, and feature a group of characters who are nearly as quirky as the setting. Charles, Dude, Cal, Mad Mel, and Bob return to help Chris solve the mystery. While Silent Night is a mystery, no one is murdered in this installment.

Other books in the Folly Beach Mystery Series include Folly, the debut novel released in 2007, The Pier, Washout, The Edge, The Marsh, Ghosts, Missing, Final Cut, First Light, and Boneyard Beach. Noel will be on Folly Beach the last week in September and the first week of October for the following book signings:

- September 29, The Lost Dog Cafe, 7:30 a.m.-1 p.m.
- September 29, The Grill and Island Bar, 6-9 p.m.
- October 2, Tides Hotel, 12-3 p.m.
- October 4, The Lost Dog Cafe, 7:30 a.m.-1 p.m.

Noel's books are available on Folly at Bert's Market, Mr. John's Beach Store, and Roasted, located in the Tides Hotel. They are also available through your local bookseller or online at www.billnoel.com, amazon.com, and barnesandnoble.com.

As we approach the end of Summer and our ocean begins to feel more and more like bath water instead of a refreshing reprieve from the 100+ degree temps, sometimes the only sustenance that sounds remotely appealing is a cool, crisp salad. With this simple, flavorful vinaigrette, you can dress up your own greens, or just drop in this popular Center Street deli and order the house salad, chef salad, or the Althea wrap and taste all the basil goodness for yourself! — Lindsey Chambers

The Beer Snob

By Dr. Jeffrey M. Gredlein

While The Barrel may not have every beer that The Beer Snob writes about, chances are they will. The Barrel is located at 1859 Folly Road. Sweetwater Runs Deep

IPAS GET ALL THE GLORY, BUT GOOD OL' PALE ALES ARE WORTH REVISITING

An interesting trend has been happening, where I find myself seeking out not the wealth of IPAs on offer, but the little, or older, brother pale ale. Although originally an English creation, known as bitter in all of its different forms, the pale ale is something quite different when brewed with American malts and hops. Nearly every microbrewery offers a pale ale, and the range of differences across breweries is quite striking.

Co-opted from the English pale ale style, the American version tends to be more hoppy, more crisp, sharper and lighter-bodied, compared to the stronger malt levels and thicker character of the import variety. American pale ales often employ a citrus hop flavor which dominates the malt presence, although the earthy nature of the malt taste should still be in the mix. The beers tend to be extremely clear and bright, colors range from slightly dark golden to reddish-amber.

Not reaching the levels of American India Pale Ales, there should still be a semi-strong bitter aspect to these brews, which typically remains in the aftertaste. Hops will dominate the taste, flavors and mouthfeel, but should not be overwhelming, which can be the case with American IPAs. Unlike English pale ales, American versions will have high carbonation levels, which make them great for hot summer days, as well as good companions for grill fare and spicier foods alike.

Introduced in 1997, Sweetwater 420 quickly became the brewery's best seller. I've had a strange relationship with Sweetwater Brewing Company. I'm not a huge fan of their standard line of bottled beers, preferring their one-offs and seasonal selections. And the beer from Sweetwater that is most widely available is 420. Dated silly references aside, when this beer hit the scene, I recall really liking it due to its crisp, easy-going nature. Yet, years later, as both pale ales and IPA's were getting bigger and bigger, 420 seemed to underperform.

However, I recently nabbed a 420, and I have to say, it was quite enjoyable. The beer is hop forward yet balanced, modern yet similar enough to the classic Sierra Nevada Pale Ale that it's almost old school.

The brewery calls 420 an extra pale ale. Although there is no recognized 'extra pale ale' category, 420 is a tad gentler and less aggressive than many APAs. Very drinkable and non-offending, this would be a solid introduction to the APA style.

420 is a light orange gold color with tons of carbonation streaming from the bottom of the glass up to a medium sized off white head. Aroma is citrus, somewhere between the bite of grapefruit and the sweetness of orange, with a dose of doughy bread smell; certainly not overpowering.

The flavor is more complex, but not much, and follows the smell, with west coast bitter hops leading for much of the glass. Malt is present and slightly grainy and spicy, but never overtakes the hops. Medium to thin bodied, this one goes down easy and mellow.

For a crisp summer beer that you can drink all day, yet one that offers tons more flavor and enjoyment than any American macro lager, you could do way worse than Sweetwater 420. I like this brew, and you can find the fish tap all over. Enjoy the brews ... Cheers.

Folly's Pirate Troubadour

GOING DOWN MEMORY LANE WITH LOCAL MUSICIAN VINNY YOUNGBLOOD

I was in my early 20s, we were called "VO" and we played great venues like the Double Door Inn in Charlotte. I moved to San Francisco in 1987 and lived there for five years, playing with great musicians like Jef Labes, Huey Lewis, and Mickey Shine. I then moved to Naples, Fla., and while there a guitarist I knew, Scott Bristow, called and talked me into moving here.

My brother lived here and I had a nephew attending the College of Charleston, so I said "why not?" One of the first shows I played here was in West Ashley, and I'm up on stage and a group of five guys come in and are really digging the music. During a set break, they asked me to step outside and talk with them, and then tried to recruit me into the KKK! I was like, "where am I?" I declined, of course. Anyway, the first place I lived was on a sailboat here on Folly. I even lived on the actual beach for a bit, and just decided this was home.

FC: What is your favorite thing about the island?

VY: My favorite thing about Folly Beach is the Sushi by Lisa! Other than that, it's living here with my sweet Andipants. I love living here, being in love, and writing music. So much inspiration.

FC: Who or what first inspired you to play music?

VY: My big brother started taking guitar lessons when I was little, and I fell in love with the instrument and started to teach myself from what I heard him doing. I even made my own guitar with a frying pan and rubber bands, and played every chance I had! Jimi Hendrix and John Lennon became my biggest influences as I grew older.

FC: You've drawn a lot of comparisons to the fictional pirate Jack Sparrow. If you were inclined to pillage and plunder, where on the island would you hide your booty?

VY: That comparison just makes me mad, because anyone who has known me a long time will tell you that Jack Sparrow ripped ME off!! I'm pretty sure Johnny Depp owes me royalties. And I would not hide those royalties in a treasure box on Folly; I'd buy more guitars, of course.

FC: What is one thing your neighbors would be surprised to learn about you?

VY: When I was about 8-years old, a friend of mine caught a huge softshell turtle in Rock Hill. I lied and said I caught it, and ended up getting on the local news and everything over it. I still feel really bad about that. Sorry, Tommy!

FOLLY'S NEWS STAND WAS THE BERT'S OF THE 1950S

FOLLY FLASHBACK

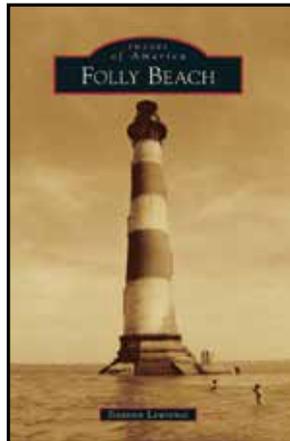

BY STRATTON LAWRENCE

The News Stand, at the corner of East Hudson Avenue and Center Street, was a focal point of the community in 1957, popular for its fried chicken dinner and 15 cent hot dogs. In this image, owner Tommy Weinges stands at the screen door. His wife, Kitty, is the first woman on the right. Their daughter, Sallie, is the little girl standing at the front of the porch on the right. A magazine rack stood to the left when patrons entered the door.

The porch also served as the bus stop for Folly Beach students riding to school in downtown Charleston. Marlene Estridge recalls that in the early 1950s, the bus only picked up about 10 students on James Island, most of which was still farmland.

SALT MARSH DIARIES

BY CAPTAIN ANTON DUMARS OF TIDELINE TOURS

We watched two pods of dolphins swimming near the convergence of Folly Creek and First Sister Creek. Thirty yards separated them. One pod of five individuals, likely females, included one adolescent and one young pup. The other group, a pair of large adults, presumed males. At first, the two males kept their distance, like satellites orbiting about a planet. Then they closed on and merged with the female pod. Thrashing fins and flukes erupted the water within the combined pod. Two or three adults spun over, under, and around each other in close proximity. They were mating.

By late July, the spartina grass has reached its zenith. The salt marsh, now a brilliant green, sits waiting to relax. Marsh wrens busy themselves into and out of their spartina nests, woven together at the top of the tallest creek-side grass. For such a small bird, wrens sing a big, beautiful song. A clapper rail, hidden deep in the low marsh, mocked us from the distance. Another echoed the same sentiment.

On Folly Island, all variables tend to peak in late July. Sea surface temperature approaches its highest temperature. Fresh water usage, garbage tonnage, and meals served peak in July. Trinkets purchases in souvenir shops reach an annual high. In July, vacation rentals approach maximum capacity. So do accommodation taxes collected. Boat charters, paddleboard and kayak rentals peak. Loggerhead nesting frequency likely peaks in July. One graphed curve characterized most of Folly's functions.

A big sigh will finally arrive with the second week of August. For better or for worse, the town summits the hump and begins its relaxing descent downward toward cooler weather.

As fall approaches, the salt marsh responds. Spartina grass shoots up tassels of small, pale yellow flowers. Once this happens, fall marsh colors, yellows and greens, light up in low-angle, late afternoon light.

For several days in a row during July, my guests aboard the Tideline witnessed dolphin-mating events. As heard, under water, with the hydrophone, lots of whistles and echolocation buzzing accompany this ritual. Sometimes posturing among the males prompted them to jump from the water. Within seconds, the mating parties efficiently finish their business and assume their normal, gender-separate lives. With success, clumsy swimming football-sized pups will take their first breath next July. Then moms and aunts will get busy chasing mullet to feed their progeny into the fall.

August Fishing Report

By Captain Geoff Bennett
Charleston Charter Fishing

Even with the arrival of the heat of the summer, fishing has continued to be quite productive. By leaving first thing in the morning, anglers will tilt the odds in their favor. Once on the water, fishermen will have no shortage of options whether it is stalking redfish on the flats or chasing some of the big toothy critters in the middle of the harbor.

Redfish have been making short work of any well placed bait. Use your cast net to grab some finger mullet or menhaden and head for structures like docks and rock groins. We've been fishing these live baits on carolina rigs with a 3/0 circle hook. It's important that you use a weight heavy enough to hold the bait stationary or your rig will tumble along the bottom until it snags.

As for trout, nothing new here. Popping corks remain the way to go. Surprisingly, we've had better luck with mud minnows under corks than with shrimp. It usually has been the other way around. If little fish keep stealing your live shrimp, switch over to a D.O.A. 3" artificial shrimp. Their Glow/Gold Rush Belly color has been quite effective.

Anglers fishing for flounder have been reporting good success. Try fishing finger mullet along the bottom around the same structures mentioned above. When you think you have a bite try to wait a few seconds (if you can) before setting the hook. We've been picking up quite a few flounder with mud minnows under a popping cork as well.

Fly fishing has been interesting. We have been finding larger schools of redfish on the flats at low tide. However, they have been eating the best on high flood tides when often cruising alone or with just a few other fish. Spoon flies in copper and gold have been the way to go. Make sure that your flies have a good weed guard so you don't get hung up in the grass.

See you on the water!

OUTSTANDING IN HIS FIELD

BY CHARLIE STONECYPHER

Howdy folks, I hope everyone is enjoying their summer. I thought I'd take a moment to address some good and bad medicine for your landscape. Just like all living things, landscapes and gardens can become sick if not cared for and fed well. There are several ways to treat them.

Remember the saying, "An apple a day, keeps the doctor away?" Preventive maintenance is always key to practicing good health, whether in landscapes, autos, homes, and of course, people. If you're at the point of treating symptoms and problems with over-the-counter chemicals you're way behind the game, not to mention it's a money pit which never ends because you're not addressing the root "literally" of the problem.

We've all seen the constant bombardment of these television prescription drug ads that ramble off a huge list of possible side effects that are often worse problems than the original ailment, (internal bleeding? Yikes! No thanks!) Well the same goes for a lot of the products that are sold by one stop shopping home and garden stores. Most of these products do come with a long, nasty list of side effects for the environment around us but they're not made public (yet). Also, technically by law if you do not have an applicators license in the State of South Carolina you cannot legally spray round up or any fungicides, pesticides, etc.

OK, enough guilt. So what do we do? Let's start with some natural things to help prevent problems:

1. Water correctly. If you don't have native plants that are established then your plant material and lawns will need the right amount of watering to keep them healthy and pest and disease resistant. Too much water and you may get fungus in your lawn (those yellow circles) or scale and other problems on your plants.

2. Compost. There are many ways to do this. A couple of chicken wire bins to throw all your leaves and clippings in works nice. For kitchen compost put your coffee grounds, egg shells, banana peels, veggie parts etc in a composting bin outside. You can make one pretty easily or if you are concerned about critters I highly recommend a tumbling bin with a latch to seal it and a handle to spin it occasionally. Add some leaves to it and within a year you'll have usable material to feed your yard and plants. I did my veggies with it this year and had good results. Grass clippings work great as well. Make sure your mower has a mulching blade on it.

3. Try some household weed killers. There's a site on the internet called thriftyfun.com that has several techniques such as pouring your crab boil water with the spicy seasoning in it, or different types of vinegars. You're smart, savvy and you have the research skills to do this!

4. Try things for bugs as well. Garlic and pepper mixed in water can work, so does dissolving a bar of organic soap in water overnight then spraying. (source: www.todayshomeowner.com)

Well, I'm out of room and this could go on forever, so do your research and practice good health! We don't want your yard to end up in a bad prescription commercial. Aloha!
