Catching Summer Fun

CAST OFF MONTHLY FISHING TOURNAMENT SERIES KICKS OFF IN MAY

Special to The Current

This spring and summer, catch fish, fun, and prizes at the Charleston County Parks & Recreation Commission's Cast Off Fishing Tournament at the Folly Beach and Mt. Pleasant fishing piers. The Mount Pleasant Pier will kick off the Cast Off Fishing Tournament series on Saturday, May 11, and the Folly Beach Pier will host its first tournament of the season on May 25.

The Folly Beach Pier continues the tournament season on May 25. Folly Beach Cast Off Fishing Tournaments continue throughout the summer on June 22, Aug. 31, and Sept. 28.

The pier will also host the annual "Take a Kid Fishing Day," a free kids' tournament hosted by the Folly Beach Anglers, on June 1 from 10 a.m.-2 p.m. Folly Beach's wooden pier stretches out 1045' into the ocean and offers spectacular views, fishing, dining and events. Common catches off the Folly pier include blue fish, sheepshead, spotted sea trout, and whiting.

Both piers offer everything an expert or a novice needs, including equipment rentals, tackle, and frozen bait, plus knowledgeable staff to offer tips. The piers also provide snack bars, gift shops and restrooms. So slap on some sunscreen and head out this summer for some good-spirited competition!

May tournaments offer awards for the largest game fish catch in each of the following categories: Adult Angler, Lady Angler, Youth Angler (12 and under), Senior Angler (60+), and Total Weight of Five Fish.

Tournament registration fees are $10 for ages 13 and up, $9 for members of the military, $8 for seniors and ages 12 and under, or $5 for fishing pass holders. The final tournaments at each pier will have a similar award and pricing structure; mid-season tournaments will offer awards for the top three biggest fish category.

Registration is available online at CharlestonCountyParks.com/fishing through the Thursday prior to each tournament. On-site registration for tournaments begins at 6 a.m. the day of the event. Summer tournament hours are 6 a.m.-2 p.m. and prizes are awarded afterward. For more information call the Folly Beach Pier at (843) 762-9516 or visit CharlestonCountyParks.com.

Low-flying DNR Plane Monitors South Carolina Coastline

from Staff Reports|

On Tuesday April 24 Folly Beach Public Safety received several calls concerned about a low-flying C210 airplane around the coast. According to FBPS's Facebook page, Owen Barker, Chief Pilot for SC Department of Natural Resources (SCDNR) Law Enforcement division, said the flight was classified as a "Turtle Survey/Stranding Flight" for the SCDNR's biology division.

According to Barker, SCDNR flies this specific flight once a month, flying around 100 knots (about 115 mph) from to the north tip of Kiawah and fly south along the shoreline at 150-200 feet, 25 feet offshore for the "stranding portion of the flight. "During the flight, we are looking for any marine creature that has washed ashore or has beached itself," said Barker. "If something is located alive, rescue crews are contacted and given the GPS coordinates of the animal. They, in turn, rush to the scene to save the creature. If the animal is deceased, recovery teams from the Charleston Aquarium travel to the GPS coordinates in order to perform a necropsy and secure the remains away from sightseers."

The plane then makes a turn back northbound after Hilton Head. This starts the "turtle survey" portion of the flight. "We fly one mile offshore at 900 feet and count leatherback and loggerhead sea turtles," said Barker. "We also count other marine creatures such as bottlenose dolphins, rays, sharks, whales, etc." In this flight configuration, they fly north to Myrtle Beach. At Myrtle, the plane turns southbound, descend back to 150-200 feet and resume the "stranding" portion of the flight along the shoreline to the south tip of Folly Beach.

During two weeks over the summer, SCDNR performs a series of "Turtle Nesting" flights. They depart Mount Pleasant Regional Airport and fly northbound to Myrtle Beach, reverse course and fly southbound to Hilton Head. "These flights allow our biologist to locate/plot sea turtle nest along the coast," said Barker. "These flights are early morning flights and are flown at 100 feet right over the breakers."

The SCDNR has a flight exemption from the Federal Aviation Authority called a "Low-Altitude waiver," which allows its aircraft to be flown at those altitudes. "Every pilot goes through initial training and annual recertification before they are allowed to fly these specific flights," said Barker.

FOLLY

You may remember me from a few months ago when I was found tied out on Folly Beach when my owners could no longer care for me. But I'm back again, more ready than ever to find my forever family! I've grown into a beautiful, silly boy. I'm a smart guy, and learn quickly, but I've still got so much puppy-playfulness, so I need someone to help continue my training. I love to play with dogs, and wrestle in the mud. Please ask a staff member if you would like to meet with me!

PUFF 'N' STUFF

I'm seeking fellow independent, kindhearted introverts to come in and meet me, so that we can fall in love and I can finally find my forever home! I do pretty well with other cats as long as I have plenty of time to adjust and get to know my new family. I am such a stunning cat, I need constant maintenance for my long fur to make sure it stays silky smooth! I have a lot of personality and am very entertaining to watch, so ask for more information about me!

COUNCIL SET TO VOTE ON STRICTER NOISE ORDINANCE THIS MONTH THAT COULD AFFECT SEVERAL LOCAL BUSINESSES

By Bill Davis | News Editor

Folly is either about to get a lot quieter, or another step too close to becoming Isle of Palms.

On Tuesday, May 14, City Council will open debate for the second reading of a stiffer noise ordinance that would curtail live music and other sounds louder than 65 decibels reaching residential structures.

Currently, the city relies on the discretion of responding police officers to decide if someone, some house, or some business is making too much noise. The proposed ordinance would give a scientific limit to how much noise could be made without facing a stiff fine.

A normal conversation can range from roughly 50-60 decibels, and a hair dryer or vacuum cleaner rates 70 decibels.

The proposed ordinance would most likely directly affect restaurants and bars in the central business district, especially those that feature live music or deejays. It would also ban amplified music being played on the second floor or higher of a business.

Additionally, it focuses on quieting down houses rented for a short term for weddings and other celebrations, as it would outright ban outdoor amplified music.

City Councilman DJ Rich, who also co-owns Planet Follywood, served on the committee and presented the proposed ordinance at last month's Council meeting.

"We are trying to protect everybody," says Rich. "[The City] has received lots of complaints over the years, and we've tried several times in the past, but none of the past ordinances had any teeth."

The proposed ordinance would levy fines of up to $500 for a first offense, and an additional fine of $1,087 for a second offense. Additionally, multiple or chronic violators could lose their business license with the city.

"We did not want this to be 'the day the music died,'" says Rich. "We can all still have fun. We tried to be as fair to everybody. Ninety-percent of businesses are just fine, we all just need to tone it down, myself included."

Rich says that if the City wanted to really crack down, they could have adopted the same noise ordinances as on peninsula Charleston, where fines are incurred because what's going on inside a business could simply be heard outside.

Rich says he has already spent time over the past few weeks touring the business district with a decibel meter in hand and says most businesses have nothing to worry about.

Police Chief Andrew Gilreath says the "current noise ordinance in effect now is fine, from the perspective if that is the kind of ordinance you want, where council wanted an officer to determine on their opinion — but Council wanted one more easily enforced, more concrete, with a number attached."

Officers will have decibel meters to go around, under the proposed ordinance, to check exactly how much noise is coming out of a business, house, or party.

But how exact can they be, as a total sound reading may be infiltrated by passing cars, a person yelling momentarily, a generator kicking on and grunting, all pushing the meter deeper into the red?

Gilreath argues for a common-sense approach where the officer would take multiple readings of a period of time. "And if the meter is bouncing to the music coming out of a bar ..."

"Quite honestly, I do not think every bar puts out too much noise, but every bar has its loud times, from time to time," says Gilreath, adding that everyone has had a chance to unsuccessfully "police" themselves on this matter.

Hank Weed owns Chico Feo, an outdoor bar and restaurant located on East Ashley Ave., a block off the central business area.

Weed's establishment offers music regularly and he would like to see the ordinance "tweaked," especially in relation to the decibel level. He thinks it is too low and will negatively affect his business.

On the other hand, Paul Chrysostom, owner of the oldest business on Folly, Mr. John's Beach Store, would like something done about not only the volume of music coming out of his neighboring businesses, but also the lyrics.

"I have no problems with bars having music, but when it spills into my business and I cannot listen to my radio in my own store do I start having a problem," says Chrysostom. "My business is largely catering to families and in summertime there are kids walking around at 9 or 10 o'clock at night, and some of the deejays can be kind of foul."

Ed James runs Loggerhead's Beach Grill and would like to see members of Council get a fuller "education" on decibel levels before casting their votes. "One member came out of the last Council meeting saying, 'I don't know what 65 decibels sounds like.'"

Steve Carroll stands at the crossroads of all the businesses' perspectives, as he is the current president of the Folly Association of Business (FAB). And he has a couple of problems.

The biggest one was access to the discussion that led up to the proposed ordinance. Carroll says that the City did not reach out to the business community for input, or a possible compromise solution where everyone could be happy.

And that means his membership didn't know what was being considered "until they started counting votes" at the Council meeting. "Snapper Jacks has been there for a long time and never had a ticket" for violating the noise ordinance, says Carroll.

Chief Gilreath confirms there has been only one ticket issued in recent years for noise ordinance violations.

Carroll, who had previously been associated with The Washout and has been the past president of the Charleston Restaurant Association, wishes the city had a livability consultant to hash out some solutions.

"It has to be a compromise ... it's got to be a fair compromise before you go and change the way people make their living," says Carroll. "Like to at least have some input or hear the discussion before they start reading ordinances."

Additionally, Carroll wonders why the current noise ordinance couldn't have been better enforced, the bad eggs identified and dealt with.

One of the businesses that's garnered multiple complaints has been Snapper Jacks, which has music on its second floor and rooftop bar. Snapper Jacks is owned by a corporation, the Bottle Cap Group, headquartered in Charlotte.

Bottle Cap marketing director Morgan Conroy says her company is "still doing research" into the matter, adding part of what sets Folly apart in the area is a person's ability to walk down the street, "hopping from bar to bar, seeing bands."

If that were gone, she says, it would become a "missing element." But, Conroy adds, her company is committed to working with the city and "be courteous" to the houses that surround their building.

Councilmember Rich hears all the concerns but reminds Carroll and others that the city "does not run through the FAB; it does its own thing," and adds that FAB had representation in the process, "in that I am a member" and a still current business owner in addition to serving on council.

Nobody Sells More Folly Beach

TUESDAY, APRIL 2 GOOD-BYE FLIPPER

The Responding Officer (R/O) was dispatched to the beach at 1100 West Ashley Avenue in reference to a dead dolphin that had washed up on the beach. The carcass was dragged above the waterline and had caution tape attached to it. The Marine Mammal Stranding office (of NOAA) was contacted to pick up the animal for necropsy.

FRIDAY, APRIL 5 CRACK IS WHACK

The R/O responded to a call to a Folly Beach hotel around 1 a.m. in reference to a disorderly person. Upon arrival, the officer met with hotel security who were attempting to deal with a 64-year-old intoxicated man who the officer had run into earlier in the night. The subject was being unruly, uncooperative, and had brought a glass of wine with him outside the hotel. Told to put the glass down, the subject threw it forcefully into a flower box. He was arrested and charged with Disorderly Conduct. During a search of his person, officers found some cash and some crack pipes.

SATURDAY, APRIL 6 'OH S' IS RIGHT!

The R/O was dispatched to an apartment in the 1600 block of East Ashley Avenue around 3 a.m. in reference to a case of Trespassing. The officer met with an older couple from Simpsonville, SC, who said an unknown blonde female with lots of tattoos entered the code to their rental house and came inside. The subject walked directly up to the third floor claiming she was looking for someone named "Rossi." The complainant said the subject was highly intoxicated at the time. When the couple informed the woman she was in the wrong house, she said, "oh s. I'm sorry. Don't call the police." The subject then exited the residence out the back door. The complainants did not believe anything had been stolen from the house.

SATURDAY, APRIL 13 KNOCKED OUT COLD

The R/O was dispatched to the first block of West Ashley Avenue around 2 a.m. in reference to a call about someone being hit by a car. Upon arrival, he found a man lying on the ground near the road. The 29-year-old male said he had not been hit by a car, but that he had been knocked out in a fight with an unknown male. A friend of the victim was assisting the man, and helped him up and home. The victim refused to press charges, so the case was closed.

SUNDAY, APRIL 14 PARTY NAP?

The R/O was dispatched to the beachfront near the Folly Beach Pier around 1:30 p.m. in reference to an unconscious male in the dunes. Upon further observation, the man was simply sleeping. When roused, the 54-year-old subject smelled, looked, and acted drunk, and was arrested for public intoxication and taken to jail. On the way, the R/O attempted to question the subject, but he fell asleep in the back of the patrol car. At the jail, a search of his person discovered a small amount of cocaine in his wallet. A Possession of Narcotics charge was added.

TUESDAY, APRIL 16 SPRINGING A LEAK

Police and fire were dispatched to some oceanfront apartments in the early evening in reference to a serious water leak. Upon arrival, the R/O observed water pouring out of the roof. Maintenance and management people were called in and able to stop the leak (cause is not revealed in incident report). Water had flooded into four different units of the complex, three of them occupied, and a water remediation service was called in and began vacuuming the water out. Around midnight, a 70-year-old man called dispatch to complain about the noise of the vacuums. Officers went to the complainant's room and met him in person. Officers believed the complainant to be intoxicated, but after a conversation explaining what was happening, the man accepted the situation and the noise.

FRIDAY, APRIL 19 A MIGHTY WIND

The R/O was dispatched to an East Arctic Avenue address in reference to an incident where someone had fallen off of a porch. Upon arrival, the officer found a 56-year-old male from Massachusetts lying on his stomach on the ground. The man said he was leaning against the porch railing when a hard wind blew, the railing broke, and he fell to the ground. The officer observed the wooden railing was indeed broken. An ambulance was brought in and took the man to MUSC, and the rental agency was notified.

SATURDAY, 4-20 THE NEED FOR SPEED

The Folly Beach Public Safety Chief of Police was driving onto the island in his unmarked car when a black Mercedes passed him at a high rate of speed. The chief pulled in behind the vehicle and determined the Mercedes to be going about 80 mph in a 45 mph zone. The chief backed off and observed the car swerve into the single lane at the last second as the lanes merged. The car then slowed due to traffic slowing down. The chief activated his blue lights and pulled the subject vehicle over. The 51-year-old male driver claimed to be "just going with traffic," but the chief knew different, and arrested and cuffed the man, charging him with Reckless Driving. The subject was taken to jail, and the Mercedes was towed.

MONDAY, APRIL 22 LASCIVIOUS BEHAVIOR

The R/O met the complainants in the Public Safety Headquarters lobby around 4 p.m. in reference to an incident that had taken place the day before. The female complainant, age 33, said she and her husband were on the beach in the 1300 East Ashley Avenue area when they were approached by a male subject they knew from around Folly Beach. The victim was sunbathing on her stomach when the subject distracted her husband and snapped a photo of "the area between her legs and buttocks" without her consent. The husband saw what happened and saw the flash of the phone go off. The subject claimed his phone was malfunctioning. The subject was identified to the police by his Facebook profile.

LOCAL AUTHOR JACKIE MORFESIS RELEASES MERMAID CROSSING, A PERSONAL STORY OF MYTHIC POETRY

By Miranda Steadman | Contributing Writer

Local author Jackie Morfesis is celebrating the publication of her poetic tale Mermaid Crossing, a journey from childhood to adulthood through the eyes of a mermaid. Morfesis grew up in New Jersey but was born in Charleston. Morfesis returned to Folly Beach every summer during the '60s and '70s, or back during "the cool days," as Morfesis says.

While a Rotary Scholar at Rutgers University Morfesis traveled to Athens, Greece for a year to study goddess imagery and Ancient Greek mythology. Now as an artist, author, and advocate, she believes everyone needs the freedom to tell their story and explains that her aquatic tale is about empowering women to speak their truth and to heal in hopes that readers going through the same struggles can identify.

Inspired by her studies of mythology in Greece, Mermaid Crossing features poetry about Ancient Greek goddesses such as Persephone, who was abducted and taken to the underworld by Hades. An excerpt from the novel notes, "No dark lover needs to take me down. I swim alone ... dreaming and waking in rhythm." When writing Mermaid Crossing, Morfesis hoped to offer a transformation of healing that her readers could relate to.

True to its underwater setting, Mermaid Crossing contains a lot of ocean imagery, such as diving deep into an inner world and resurfacing. The story is divided into four sections. First, the reader dives under currents to go within and connect to wounds that were once shadowed. Following this phase come moonbeams that give strength we receive from Mother Earth. Next is the time of healing before the final phase of surfacing, a metaphor for reclaiming your life symbolized by breaking through the water.

Following a spinal injury, Morfesis felt she truly did go under water physically and emotionally, which inspired her writing. "For me, it almost makes all of the suffering worthwhile," says Morfesis. Mermaid Crossing is beautifully written in poetry. Morfesis hopes to use her book as a starting point to host workshops for women to begin their own story. "I don't just want this to be a feather in my cap, I want this to be a vehicle for healing," says Morfesis.

WOODY'S MUSIC SERIES SHOWCASES WHITNEY HANNA

By Miranda Steadman | Contributing Writer

Every Monday in May, local songbird Whitney Hanna will share her sweet voice at Woody's Pizza & Subs. A veteran of the Charleston music scene, Hanna has been singing every Friday at Moe's downtown for the past seven years.

For the last two-and-a-half years local singer/songwriter Jeff Caldwell has joined her at Moe's. Recently, Hanna has been playing music around town with soulful singer and guitarist John Heinsohn from the local blues rock band Weigh Station. Find this dynamite duo playing throughout Charleston town under the name Radio Starship.

Hanna has some superfly surprises in store for the Woody's crowd this May. On Monday, May 6, she will be joined by Plane Jane's Chris Williams on saxophone and Wayne Mitchum on bass. On Monday, May 13, Hanna will offer heartwarming harmonies along with Caldwell.

Don't miss music on Monday, May 20 for Hanna's new project named The Candy Cigarettes, which includes Jeff Caldwell on guitar and Caryn Egan from Michael Martin & the Beautiful Mess on viola.

"I think when two confident women can work together to make beautiful music it is powerful," says Hanna.

You can also catch The Candy Cigarettes at Rita's Seaside Grille on Sunday, May 26. The next night, Monday, May 27, Hanna will be joined on the Woody's deck with an out-of-town guest drummer and two surprise special guests.

A Juicy Endeavor

LOCAL FAMILY BRINGS TASTY SHIP'S WHEEL CIDER TO FOLLY AND BEYOND

by Jessica Cobb | Contributing Writer

Cider drinkers used to be few and far between in our country, and the cider that was mass-produced and available was often associated with sugary sweet concoctions marketed towards wine drinkers as an alternative to beer in certain situations.

I was first introduced to hard cider at the tender age of 21 at a sports bar in Atlanta where I worked at for many years. We served a deliciously semi-dry and bittersweet European cider called Woodpecker (not to be confused with the popular American version, Woodchuck) on draft, and it was crisp and perfect at the end of a long, hot shift during football season. Unfortunately, this cider isn't as readily-available in the U.S. as it used to be, but thankfully many other great ciders have come out since.

As a cider drinker myself it used to be difficult to order one without receiving an eye roll from the bartender, and now those times are finally changing. Hard cider started as all the rage in England in the 1600s as an alternative to drinking contaminated water that was available at the time. Prohibition helped cider's journey through time as many attempted to pass it off as just a form of apple juice, and so it briefly skirted through the market that way. Modern times have started treating it with more of a grown up approach, by allowing its complexity to shine through. Although France is currently the largest cider producing country in the world, USA is playing catch-up at number four with ciderys in 48 states. The Jamison family in Charleston is helping that number with their Ship's Wheel Cider.

Scott and Cindy Jamison recognized the absence of locally-made cider in Charleston, and since they already had a love of the beverage, they decided to jump into the market to be the first producers in coastal South Carolina. Along with their family members Andrew, John, and Maggie, Ship's Wheel is serving up some seriously flavorful suds.

Making cider is very much like making wine in the way that juice from apples is fermented with yeast the same as winemaking is with grapes. In fact, cider is technically classified as a wine by the Federal and State government.

Cider can be made from other fruits such as pears, cherries, and berries, but the industry's favorite is obviously made from apples. Folly Beach resident Andrew Jamison says Ship's Wheel uses a blend of multiple apple varieties from New York state and looks forward to eventually using apples from the Carolinas and Virginia once they have the upcoming cidery/tasting room open in Park Circle. Andrew and his family pride themselves on the pure, balanced flavor of the apples and by using crushed apples in their process rather than juice concentrate like some other companies make the mistake of doing.

Ship's Wheel currently offers three styles: Original Blend that is slightly sweet and tart; Dry-Hopped, which has a drier, bittersweet kick; and Summer Splash which adds a touch of grapefruit to the tart apple blend. They are all delicious on their own, but if you're in to experimenting with mixology they are fun to add to cocktails as well. You could add a shot of cinnamon flavored whiskey to the Original Blend for a spiced apple flavor. The Summer Splash would be yummy as a topper to a classic vodka soda.

Although there's no hard date set just yet, the previously mentioned tasting room at 1033 & 1037 East Montague Ave. in Park Circle is nearing completion, and I will personally be excited to leave our little island for a field trip to check it out. Meanwhile, you can find Ship's Wheel at many places on Folly Beach, including Blu, Loggerhead's, Drop-In, Chico Feo, Planet Follywood, Surf Bar, and others.

While there are plenty of new breweries popping up around Charleston, the addition of this cider company is already receiving a warm welcome. In the meantime, next time you're shopping at the local Harris Teeter or hanging out at your favorite Folly Beach watering hole, be sure to purchase an ice cold Ship's Wheel cider and you'll see just what all the fuss is about.

SMALL BITS OF FOLLY FOOD NEWS

by Jessica Cobb | Contributing Writer

THEIR CUP RUNNETH OVER

The Jack of Cups crew has been hard at work ... and it's paying off! They were recently spotted feeding VIPs at the 2019 High Water Festival at Riverfront Park in North Charleston. On the menu at this music, culture, and food festival curated by local band Shovels and Ropes was of course their ever-popular Red Curry Mac & Cheese served in waffle cones.

You may have also heard that Jack of Cups was recently voted "Best Pub Pop-Up" by the readers of the Charleston City Paper for their Wednesday night cameos at James Island pub Paddock & Whisky.

As far as back home here on Folly, we are all looking forward to the slow roll-out of the new Summer menu which should be complete by the beginning of May.

BLU IS GETTING BEACH BODY READY

Blu recently gave their patio a facelift with a great new awning to protect your sun-kissed skin while dining alfresco. The amazing beach front views are still on display, and we're looking for an updated menu to follow in the next few weeks.

Along with most restaurants on the island, Blu is also staffing up for the busy season to come, so if you know anyone with culinary skills send them over to the Tides Hotel to apply ... seems like with a fantastic view like that it would be easy to show up to work there!

Lastly, are you looking for a unique spot to take Mom on Mother's Day? The massive, delectable-looking brunch that Blu is offering is one of a kind, complete with a carving station and fresh seafood. Make reservations now for Sunday May 12, from 11 a.m.-3 p.m., $39 for adults and $16 for children ages 4-12.

'TIS THE SEASON GOING GREEN IN SPRING

Readers who follow the I Love Folly Beach Facebook page most likely already know that there's a new Community Herb Garden (courtesy of resident Glenda K. Brown) that recently popped up on the west side between 5th and 6th block.

Many locals pitched in to plant, sow, and fertilize this spot and it's offered up to anyone in need of fresh greenery. Scissors are hanging at the ready, so feel free to stop over and snip what you need. Spring is finally here, and with it brings a craving of all things light and fresh. Gone are the heavy winter casseroles and stews, and time to say hello again to the greens and earthy goodness from the garden. One of my favorite ways to utilize all the herbs that are springing up is to blend them together and make a yummy, versatile sauce (see recipe below).

RECIPE FROM JESSICA

Creamy Avocado Sauce

- 1 ripe avocado
- 2 cloves garlic
- 1/8 cup each of fresh basil, cilantro, and parsley
- Juice of half a lemon
- 1 tsp lemon zest
- 1/2 cup plain Greek yogurt
- 1/4 cup extra virgin olive oil

Directions:

Blend until smooth and creamy, and season with salt and pepper to taste. Use as a dip for roasted veggies; toss with cold orzo or pasta and top with grilled shrimp or a fried soft shell crab; or simply spread on grilled baguette with ricotta cheese and enjoy!

The Beer Snob

By Jeffrey Gredlein

The spring equinox has come and gone, and all is abloom in the south. As we continue on through May, the hint of summer is juxtaposed with the last grasp of winter. As pollen clogs the drains and coats the cars, a rare foray into late night 40 degree temps isn't unheard of this time of year. Ah, seasons.

I digress...the days of spring are aggressively making themselves known. And to join these wacky weeks, several more flavored beers seem appropriate. Big IPAs are a favorite of spring, as the bitter and flower notes just seem to fit with all things blooming and alive; April showers bring May flowers. I'm presently loving Hop Cakes from NoDa in Charlotte as well as several IPAs from Alpine Brewing Company.

Saison is also a great choice now, and many examples are on shelves. Although these beers were historically brewed in the winter to be enjoyed all summer, their complex nature, and earthy, yeasty, sometime fruity and yet spicy components would be a shining pick for days like these. If you've never had Ommegang's Hennepin, it is a must for your spring selections.

While I can't recall a specific 'spring' style of beer, the classic Bavarian release of this month is Maibock, or "May Bock," a lighter, hoppier, version of standard bock. I do love a good, traditional bock. But sometimes, these big lagers are quite...heavy.

An ideal spring pairing, you'll know it's a bock due to the bready, caramel malts, but German hops make it pop. Quite good, yet a bit strange, Rogue's Dead Guy is the most widely available. More in the malt department, with hints of dark fruit and herbal hop notes, Smuttynose Maibock is stronger but delicious.

To take a slight twist on the beers of May, I'll throw out two other options. Staying in Germany, but going for ale and heading north to Düsseldorf, altbier is big yet crisp, and finishes clean. These can be malty, nutty and flavorful, yet with a bitter and clean finish.

For altbiers you might find in your local shop, a classic version comes straight from Germany in the Uerige Sticke, out of Düsseldorf. If you're lucky, Coast will again brew their excellent ALTerior Motive, a great American example of the style.

Crossing the Rhineland from Germany into Belgium, I recommend for your May days, the Tripel style is a boozy and beautiful spring beer. The strongest of the beers mentioned above, Tripels are dangerously alcoholic, yet as with many brilliant Belgian beers, you may never notice until it's too late.

Belgian Tripels tend to be quite spicy, often fruity and tangy, and wonderfully alcoholic. Tripel was originally used to signify three times the malt used in a particular beer, compared with basic Belgian ales. Many indigenous Belgian versions are widely available, with Westmalle and Val-Dieu being favorites. On the other hand, several North American versions are excellent, and if you want a fresh Tripel, you can't go wrong with those from Allagash, Boulevard and Unibroue. Here's to May, here's to spring. Enjoy the brews. Enjoy the brews ... Cheers.

FOLLY FLASHBACK
BY STRATTON LAWRENCE

General Quincy A. Gillmore's plan to take Charleston via an attack on Morris Island. At the peak of the Union's occupation in 1863, as many as 16,000 troops were based on Folly, forming a tent city with far more occupants than the island has ever supported in the 150 years since. This panoramic pencil drawing by artist Alfred Waud illustrates both the wild and sizeable dunes on Folly, as well as Union soldiers pointing toward the sea and the ships forming the blockade. Drawn in May 1863, the coming summer would prove to be the most eventful in all of Folly's history. The island served as the staging ground for Union

Call of the Wild

SALT MARSH DIARIES

BY CAPTAIN ANTON DUMARS OF SPARTINA SAILING ADVENTURES

Driving north on Folly road past Battery Island Drive one morning, I saw a lanky dog-like animal cross in front of me toward an oncoming car. With incredible agility, the animal reversed course to avoid a collision. It paused by the side of the road as if to check traffic, then continued across into the woods near James Prioleau Road. I'd just seen my first lowcountry coyote.

Surrounded by salt marshes and tidal creeks, Folly Beach is an Island. Islands tend to create a geographic migration barrier to those species unable to negotiate the marsh or creeks. Despite these geographic barriers, coyotes have found their way to local barrier islands (Sullivan's, IOP, Kiawah, Johns, James, Wadmalaw). Coyotes swim and probably use causeways and bridges.

A well-documented Sullivan's Island coyote concern includes photo and video proof of cohabitation. The town has written a Coyote Management Plan and created a coyote-sighting map of the island. They've been spotted in all parts of Sullivan's Island.

Coyotes, an invasive species, inhabit the lowcountry's terrestrial top predator niche. They share the top spot with bobcats and foxes, and the occasional black bear, all native species. These predators prey on other smaller mammals, lizards, and sometimes insects. They've also been known to scavenge.

Some wonder if a healthy bobcat population hinders coyote territorial establishment. Do they share or compete for territory? Coyotes arrived on Kiawah and Seabrook in early 2011, joining a healthy bobcat population. So far, both species apparently still thrive on the islands together. Harry Mims (Folly Beach's animal control officer), recently took a report of 3 coyote kit seen on the east side near the 4th or 5th block marsh. Though he looked in the area for an hour or so, he never found the 3 young coyotes. Another (unconfirmed) adult coyote sighting occurred near 4th block East Huron Avenue. Soon Folly may need a Coyote Management Plan of its own.

Anton DuMars, a coastal geologist and longtime Folly resident, has not yet seen a coyote on Folly Beach. You can reach Anton at sailspartina@gmail.com

OUTSTANDING IN HIS FIELD

BY CHARLIE STONECYPHER

Hello Folly Family, (and outlying dwellers as well.) In the constant quest to improve things, I've grown to appreciate using a gradual technique to work towards my long-term goals. Being idle obviously won't get you to your dreams, but I've found that going full speed or "all in," on something raises the chances of getting burned out, (especially if others are involved.) Rather, I find that "tweaking," as you go yields much better future results. "Tweaking," is what I refer to as making adjustments in small increments knowing that you won't finish that day.

Meeting Goals Gradually

Instant vs. Gradual

Instant Example: A large crew comes into a bare yard and changes it by installing all-new everything from start to finish. There is lawn, new trees, shrubs and flowers. Now this may sound appealing and easy, but plants are living things and installations rarely go 100% smooth. Coordinating all the materials and labor can be very challenging. Things are going to change very soon in said yard and there will be troubleshooting and punch lists to complete. If your contractor is able to come back in a timely fashion and address any issues, be sure to treat such person nice and consider yourself fortunate.

Gradual Example: While becoming familiar with an area due to repeated exposure a long-term vision manifests. Research is done and a plan of action with realistic goals and time lines is set up. A foundation is created. Stages are planned and as they fall into place, tweaking is done to maintain the original vision.

This process can be applied to anything in Life, not just projects. A person might want to set a goal of losing 20 pounds. As we all know there is no, "instant," fix to this (that will last). You make gradual changes that will over a period of time provide the desired result.

Try this in any aspect of your goals and watch yourself grow. I use it in music, relationships and friendships, education, anything. I hope you meet your goals, "gradually but steadily," and all of you have a terrific month of May.

Love and Aloha!

Great Fishing Abounds in May

REDFISH, BLUEFISH, LADYFISH, TROUT, SPANISH MACKEREL, AND SHARKS ARE ABUNDANT IN LOWCOUNTRY WATERS THIS TIME OF YEAR

FOLLY FISHING REPORT

BY CAPTAIN GEOFF BENNETT

Warm weather has arrived and with it comes a host of seasonal species like shark, ladyfish, and bluefish. Our traditional targets, redfish and trout, are hungry as ever as bait fills our waters. Our fishery is teeming with life and opportunities for anglers are endless. You have more reasons now than ever to go fishing!

It's time to make the most of live bait when fishing for redfish. Menhaden is a favorite choice whether fished live or as cut bait. We've caught some huge redfish by pitching chunks of menhaden under docks. You'll need to use enough weight to hold your bait in place so it doesn't drift and get snagged. I use pinch-on split shot that can be easily adjusted, just add or remove these weights as needed.

Now's the time of year to start thinking about topwater trout action at first light. My favorite lure is a Heddon's Super Spook Jr. in chartreuse and black while an easy fallback is their silver mullet color. Make sure to try a variety of retrieval speeds as you work these lures. When that trout hits, resist the temptation to lift the rod tip and reel the fish tight instead. It's hard to beat those fantastic strikes!

Spanish mackerel are beginning to show up, especially in the harbor, and can be best found at first light. If you find schools of fish slashing across the surface, throw reflective casting jigs and reel them quickly through the school. Alternatively, if you know fish are present but not up top, try trolling Clark Spoons at different depths and different speeds. Remember to check your leader often as it only takes catching a few of these toothy fish to cut through it.

Per usual, sharks have returned to our waters with the warmer water temperatures. Just watch the shoreline and you'll see bonnethead sharks slicing through the water as they seek out prey. These predators will eat most anything, but chunks of blue crab and live shrimp can be especially productive. Shark fishing is an easy way to get younger anglers involved as sharks are usually hungry and put up great fights.
